Opened on the Republicans.

The chairman introduced H. Branche of the state central commit Branche of the state central commit-tee to speak to the caucus. Mr. Branche referred in an amusing way to an anecdote that he called ancient, that had been used in the republican caucus and read the resolutions adopted at the meeting of the state central committee meeting, cectaring against any amalgamation with the republicans or any other party and republicans or any other party and charging that the republicans were in a hopeless situation, unable to win in a nopeless situation, unable to win without the progressives and unable to survive long without winning. The resolutions also criticised the republicans for squasboling in the legislature over political plums regardless of platform pledges. The resolutions called for a state conference of the progressives in Hartford in June, all which it is hoped Theodore Roosevelt will be present.

Mr. Branche also read letters from encouraging conditions in the west In Connecticut Mr. Branche predict ed that the progressive cause would be showing increasing strength in the next six months and there was no reason to feel that it was losing any ground but rather gaining.

Rev. L. W. Frink was called upon and responded in an interesting strain, saying that he was glad he had cast in his fortunes with the new party. The G. O. P. had been raised, he thought, for a purpose, but it had outlived its usefulness and should some time ago have had a decent buriel.

usefulness and should some time ago have had a decent burial.

Mr. Frink said that it had been thrown into his face that the progressives had given the city over to the democrats, but it was not so. He declared he had it on good authority that overtures had been made by the progressives to the republican town committee to have the two parties put up a ticket which both would ratify, but the republican town committee had refused to do so.

Edgar H. Allen arose to clarify the impression given by the last speaker's remarks and said he wanted it understood that the progressives had stood the prize on the blue counters with a for $20 on L B, Brockett.

to run a citizen's ticket and to have a caucus called which should ratify such a ticket on a good citizenship basis regardless of the party affiliations of the men who should be nominated. But the republican town committee had declined to do this, and this was the second time that it had been tried and downed by the politicians of Norwich. They don't want the city to be run by a good citizen's ticket, but rather by a small coterie of boss politicians, he said. "I had it bad enough," responded Rev. Mr. Frink, "but this makes it
